Introduction to the Second Edition

The Nepali language is spoken by around 20 million people in the Kingdom of Nepal, where it is the national and official language. About 11 million of these speakers use Nepali as a mother tongue. Outside of Nepal, Nepali is also spoken in north-east India and in much of Bhutan. On account of its widespread use in the states of West Bengal (particularly in the district of Darjeeling) and Sikkim, the Indian Constitution recognizes Nepali as a major language of India. While Dzongkha is the national language of Bhutan, Nepali is widely spoken by many of its citizens and used as a lingua franca across the country. In short, Nepali is a major regional language used in numerous South Asian countries.

Nepali is an Indo-Aryan language, and thus part of a linguistic grouping which includes other South Asian languages such as Hindi, Bengali, Marathi and Gujarati. Modern Indo-Aryan languages are related to Sanskrit, much as modern European languages are related to Latin. Nepali is written in the Devanāgarī (or 'Nagari') script, which is also used for Hindi, Marathi and Sanskrit. Nepali Devanāgarī has 12 vowels and 36 consonants. The script is essentially phonetic, meaning that the pronunciation closely resembles the written form. The script is written from left to right, with a top line indicating the word boundaries.

This volume is made up of two discrete glossaries, first Nepali-English and thereafter English-Nepali. While similar, the lexical corpora which make up the two glossaries are actually quite distinct. The Nepali-English Glossary closely follows the content of Shambhu and Banu Oja's Nepali Beginner's Primer, and the lesson number in which a word is first used is given in the penultimate column. This 51-page glossary is organised according to the Nepali alphabetic order. The English-Nepali Glossary does not map directly onto the content of the lessons in the primer, but rather provides an extensive corpus of terms which Cornell's Nepali language instructors have been asked to translate over the years. The content of this glossary reflects the interests of generations of Cornell students who have studied anthropology, ecology, economics, politics and sociology in Nepal and through Nepali.

Acknowledgements to the Second Edition

The production of the second edition of this Nepali-English and English-Nepali Glossary has relied on the generous support of many individuals. First and foremost, without the financial and administrative support of the Department of Asian Studies at Cornell University, and specifically Professor Edward M. Gunn, Ann VanDeMark and Kim Steber, this revised and reworked glossary would never have seen the light of day. We are grateful for your trust and help. Second, the Nepali Unicode font team at Madan Puraskār Pustakālaya in Kathmandu have been a pleasure to work with. In particular, we would like to thank Amar Gurung and Pawan Chitrakar. Finally, we would like to express our appreciation to members of the Cornell community, in particular to Anne Stengle and Durga Bor at the South Asia Program for their help with the printing, Professor Kathryn March for her unflagging support and Sara Shneiderman for her careful editorial eye. Thanks to Ajay Rai of Wandering Spirits for the front cover photo. Needless to say, any remaining errors or typographical lapses are our responsibility.

Introduction to the First Edition

The Nepali language program at Cornell faces several challenges that are likely to characterize similar programs elsewhere. The number of students taking Nepali changes every year, each student has a different level of ability and there is a scarcity of published Nepali texts and dictionaries. Most importantly, most Nepali language students have specific but widely diverse fields of interest. Some students come from the Peace Corps, some come after study or travel abroad, and increasingly some come from Nepalese-American families. This means that they have very different language backgrounds and very different reasons for wanting to learn Nepali. Some want to work in development on irrigation or healthcare; others want to do PhD research on questions of religious change or women's issues; others simply want to be able to talk to older members of their families.

It has been our goal at Cornell to teach not only basic skills in spoken and written Nepali but to try to make our students linguistically competent in their chosen fields of specialization as well. Because of the difficulties in locating texts and reference books to suit all their varying needs, we have tried to create new kinds of instructional materials for Nepali which could:

- (a) teach increasingly complex grammatical structures
- (b) tailor additional vocabulary and dialogues to individual students' professional directions
- (c) wherever possible utilize material from Nepalese school books, folk stories, literature, songs, proverbs, Radio Nepal/Nepal TV, taped conversations, or other sources not created solely for the classroom

We began the Nepali Computer Project in 1988 with support between 1988 and 1992 from the Northeast Consortium for Language Teaching and Learning, Cornell South Asia Program, and the Department of Modern Languages and Linguistics. Our objective has been to develop an integrated system to provide Nepali language instructors with flexible teaching materials that can be readily adapted to suit their students' varying numbers, abilities, and wide range of interests. For this reason we chose a computer-based system because it offered the flexibility of organization and presentation that we needed.

At present, the project consists of a Beginners' Primer, a Beginning Reader, an Intermediate Reader, and this Glossary which has been compiled from the vocabulary contained in the other materials using a computer database. All of the words in this glossary are coded by subject and by the chapter or story in which they are first introduced, so that it would be possible to print out specific vocabulary lists according to topic of interest and/or level of study.

It has been a long and informative voyage from our first days, trying to produce new materials for each level of students. These volumes represent the effort not only of the language instructors and their main assistants, but also the cumulative questions, problems, and needs of students in Nepali language classes at Cornell for almost ten years. We hope that these volumes, and those that will follow, will continue to serve them in all of their diverse needs.

Acknowledgements to the First Edition

The Nepali Computer Project at Cornell owes thanks to many people. First, of course, is the Cornell South Asia Program which is making this publication possible and which has backed the Nepali language offerings at Cornell since 1984. We would like to thank the Northeast Consortium for Language Teaching and Learning for their financial support of this project. The Department of Modern Languages and Linguistics at Cornell, too, provided invaluable support both in the basic support of the Nepali language program and in the person of Ann VanDeMark, without whose administrative savvy any of this work would have been unthinkable. Professor James Gair's Sinhala glossary provided an important early model and inspiration for our efforts. And Professor Kathryn March was ever behind the project with constant advocacy and support. But above all, we are indebted to all the students through the years of Nepali teaching at Cornell who have read, revised, and added to this work. And of those students we are especially grateful for the special assistance of Christopher Scott and Bhushan Tuladar.

We are glad to be able to offer this printed version of our Nepali language materials. However, please bear in mind that this is a first edition and may contain spelling or other errors. We would deeply appreciate feedback both on technical and methodological presentation so that we can make the second edition better.

Technical Notes

Work on the first edition of this glossary started in 1988 using an early Apple Macintosh computer, a database package called FileMaker+ and the Kånchi NR Devanagari font. The glossary was subsequently published in 1992.

The second edition was prepared in May 2004 by Shambhu Oja and Mark Turin, using the Nepali Unicode environment devised by the Madan Puraskār Pustakālaya library in Kathmandu, Nepal. The original glossary was retyped as a tabulated Microsoft Word document, checked and then sorted according to the Nepali and English alphabetical orders. We have used a Unicode Nepali font called Kalimati, which is freely downloadable from the Madan Puraskār Pustakālaya website along with the keyboard layout <www.mpp.org.np>. The updated version of this bilingual glossary is currently being formatted as a searchable database for online delivery.
